Local resident takes matters in to own hands after alleyway becomes health hazard

Local pensioner forced to clean Chiswick Streets

Hounslow Council has ignored calls from local residents to take action over a neglected alleyway that runs from Turnham Green Terrace to Upham Park Road. The alley is being used as an open air bar, toilet and rubbish dump by groups of what appear to be foreign workers on a daily basis.

"In Stalinist Russia, they used to make the grandmothers sweep the streets. But I never thought that this could happen to me" says W4 local Joanna Woods. "Not once, not twice, but over and over again, the beer cans, booze bottles, fast food wrappers and, yes, human excrement, pile up as fast as I can remove them".

Joanna moved to Chiswick in 2013 and has been so disgusted by the squalor of the local cut through she has felt compelled to pick up her broom and sweep the streets herself.

"The alleyway is used by gangs of foreign workmen, who gather nightly in there where they drink and relieve themselves. Shovelling garbage is no job for a pensioner, yet nobody in authority seems to care about our alley - and I'm talking here about a public thoroughfare to the tube station used by dozens of men, women and children every day."

Since the beginning of this year Joanna has written to the Council on numerous occasions, only to be given specious arguments about 'problems of ownership' or told that the occasional one-off sweep was all that was required. Despite her continued request for anti-litter notices, they have simply been ignored.

Meanwhile the filth keeps coming with no indication of intervention by Hounslow Council creating an obvious health hazard.

"The men keep gathering in the alley, drinking and using the alley as a toilet. It's like they think 'what the hell, it's no-man's land. Let's chuck our cans over the fences and smash a few bottles too'. Yesterday, I went down to the alley where I spent two hours gathering up the beer cans and the vodka bottles. They filled two black rubbish bags - to bursting. This week my 73-year-old husband took them to the tip."

And thanks to Council Taxpaying resident Joanna, the alleyway looks beautiful . . . until tomorrow. The Chiswick Herald approached Hounslow Council for comment but has received no response up until time of print.

Chiswick landlords urged to act as HMRC campaign reaches £20m milestone

Landlords who rent out residential property in Chiswick are being warned to act now as an HMRC campaign to recover tax it believes is being underpaid each year in the sector reaches a £20 million milestone.

Franck Sidon who runs TaxAssist Accountants in Chiswick said: "HMRC's Let Property Campaign has now collected over £20 million from almost 10,000 landlords across the UK, so it is safe to say they will continue to focus on the residential rental sector.

"Some local landlords may not even realise that they are landlords, or that tax may be due, but that won't stop them facing hefty fines or even criminal prosecution. Coming forward under the Let Property Campaign will give them the best possible terms to settle any tax and interest owed. It is vital local landlords grasp this lifeline to get their own house in order."

The campaign applies to all residential property landlords, including those with just a single rental, student or holiday letting. HMRC estimates that landlords in residential property could be underpaying up to £500 million in UK tax every year.

TaxAssist Accountants Chiswick is a local business providing tax and accountancy advice and services purely to small businesses.

Memorial celebration for former Chiswick School Headmaster

Chiswick student Vlad Bunys

A well-known Putney figure, former headmaster Rory Hands, who died aged 96 in April, is to be commemorated at a special evening in Froebel College on 25 September. Rory, who lived in Putney for over 50 years, was headmaster of Chiswick School, and responsible for fashioning it into one of the country's largest comprehensive schools in the 1960s.

In retirement he was much involved as a Governor of Ibstock Place School, Froebel

College, and the Roehampton Institute, now part of the University of Roehampton. Many local residents gathered at his funeral in April, and former friends and colleagues will gather to pay tribute as part of Celebrating Rory, an evening of entertainment celebrating his life, which takes place in The Portrait Room, Froebel College, University of Roehampton, Roehampton Lane at 7 for 7:30 PM on what would have been Rory's 97th birthday, 25 September.

It is a light-hearted evening, with tributes led by Professor Sir Brian Vickers, one of Rory's most distinguished pupils, and containing an evening of largely humorous entertainment: all proceeds go to charities especially favoured by Rory. Tickets cost £5, and can be obtained by writing to The Portrait Room, Froebel College, University of Roehampton, Roehampton Lane at 7 for 7:30 PM on what would have been Rory's 97th birthday, 25 September. Local lads take on 5-a-side football tournament for Prostate Cancer UK

Rui Diogo, Farzan Imanzadeh and Bruno Cardoso, all 23 and of West London are hosting a 5-a-side football tournament in Chiswick - joining the ranks of Prostate Cancer UK's, Men United movement.

Rui, Farzan and Bruno are hoping to raise over £500 by gathering as many keen footballers to show their skills and team work ability in the tournament due to be hosted at Turnham Green Multi Sports Centre, Chiswick on Sunday the 13th of September to help the charity.

Men United is a movement for everyone who believes men are worth fighting for, and by taking on this event the pair is pledging their support, and helping to beat prostate cancer.

The West Londoners were inspired to organise the event for Prostate Cancer UK and turn their regular weekly football sessions amongst 10-12 friends into a massive get-together of 16 teams to fundraise for Prostate Cancer UK.

Farzan said: "I decided to organise this event for Prostate Cancer UK with Rui because I enjoy playing competitive football with my mates and this will be a great reason to get together during summer and hopefully make it a usual thing. We want to join the Men United army and help raise awareness for the most common cancer among men... If others see how easy it is to raise money for Prostate Cancer UK, then maybe they would organise an event of their own!"

"I am looking forward to playing football and I'm delighted to be raising awareness and much needed money to help beat prostate cancer."

Mark Bishop, Director of Fundraising at Prostate Cancer UK, said: "It's fantastic to see that Rui, Farzan and Bruno have decided to organise this event to raise funds for Prostate Cancer UK. By doing this they are joining Men United and helping to make a real difference in furthering the fight against prostate cancer."

"Whatever you do together, big or small, you'll be helping us push for real change, from more effective testing to better treatments. We thank Rui, Farzan and Bruno and wish them every success with their event."

Since it was launched 12 months ago, Men United has caught the imagination, and a new zeal for change in men's health - with more than 200,000 (and still rising) people signing up to pledge support. Men from all walks of life, from footballers to lawyers and politicians to plumbers, have formed a growing army, raising funds to find the answers for the future through research and supporting men now. The new movement also lent its backing to a successful campaign to make drugs available to the men with prostate cancer who need them.

People are being urged to search Men United, and sign up. To sponsor this event please visit www.JustGiving.com/Rui-Farzan-Bruno

Council takes action against employing casual, cash-in-hand labour

Men wait for the offer of casual, cash in hand work in Hammersmith

Hammersmith & Fulham council is asking Ravenscourt Park residents whether they want it to take on new powers against employing casual, cash-in-hand labourers. Residents have complained about the growing numbers of workers congregating in roads around Ravenscourt Park in the early mornings to seek casual jobs. The council is now consulting on whether to impose a Public Spaces Protection Order. This would enable police and council officers to target would-be employers and issue on-the-spot fines of up to £100.

"By targeting employers, we hope to reduce the casual work available, which should reduce the numbers of people looking for this," said Cllr Mike Cartwright, H&F

Council's Cabinet Member for Crime and Anti-social Behaviour. Officers would also be able to fine the workers, although initially they would direct them to services to help them to find legitimate employment and other support services. Cllr Cartwright added, "Casual workers hired in this way are often exploited, earning less than the minimum wage and exposed to unsafe working environments. We need to help them into proper jobs."

The order would apply to a restricted area comprising Ravenscourt Park, Ravenscourt Avenue, Ravenscourt Road, Ravenscourt Place and King Street between Ravenscourt Park and Ravenscourt Road. It would be prohibited to:

- Approach any person in a public place within the restricted area to offer them, or with the intent to offer them, casual employment; and

• Loiter in the restricted area between 6am and 11am, Monday to Saturday. The order would be enforced by the police and designated council officers, including neighbourhood wardens, parks police and street scene officers.

The consultation is open to residents and regular users of the Ravenscourt Park area. The consultation ends on Wednesday 17 September. If the consultation shows support for the proposed order, the new restrictions are expected to be in force by October.

Southfield Lib Dems call on support for Syrian Refugees

The Southfield Liberal Democrat FOCUS team are urging Chiswick residents to sign the petition to press the UK government to do more to help refugees. "Many people in the Southfield ward are talking about the refugee crisis involving many from Syria" said a spokesman.

"Normally, when the Lib Dems want to change something we would start our own campaign and ask you to join it. This time, we want the government to take action on the refugee crisis as fast as possible, and that means everyone signing the official government petition. This crisis isn't about politics, it's about helping the tens of thousands of people who have risked their lives to escape conflict and violence. I think we have a duty to help them."

So far, more than 250,000 people have signed the petition already. Readers are encouraged to visit <https://petition.parliament.uk/petitions/105991> to show their support

Londoners least aware exercise could help reduce risk of dementia

Survey finds 79% of Londoners not doing enough exercise - Almost eight in ten people from London (79 per cent) are not doing the amount of average weekly exercise recommended by NHS guidelines, despite evidence that taking part in regular exercise can reduce a person's risk of developing dementia, according to a survey carried out by Alzheimer's Society to mark London Memory Walk September 5th.

Research shows that taking regular exercise is one of the best things that can be done to reduce the risk of getting dementia, yet 68% of Londoners (72% men, 64% women) didn't know that regular exercise and physical activity could reduce the risk of people developing dementia.

NHS guidelines advise that adults should take part in at least 150 minutes of moderate aerobic activity such as brisk walking every week, but this survey shows that only 18% of people in London are following these guidelines (22% men, 13% women), while 12% don't participate in any exercise at all during an average week.

The region with the lowest number of people doing the recommended amount of average weekly exercise is the West Midlands - only 14%, while the regions where most people do the recommended amount are the North West and South West - 20%. People in London are the least aware of the benefits of exercise in reducing the risk of developing dementia (32%) while the highest awareness is in the South West (44%).

Current evidence suggests that an increase in physical activity, along with increasing cognitive activity, eating a healthy diet, not smoking and management of diseases such as diabetes, have the potential to reduce the risk of dementia. These findings have been reported in several studies including a recent review of dementia risk factors published in the Alzheimer's & Dementia Journal, as well as the World Alzheimer's Report 2014.

Dr Clare Walton, Research Manager at Alzheimer's Society said: "The results of Alzheimer's Society's survey are concerning, showing a lack of awareness among the general public of the benefits of exercise. What's good for the heart is good for the head and regular exercise is one of the best ways to reduce your risk of developing dementia, yet many people questioned didn't know that."

"People living with dementia should also try to keep physically active as it can bring many benefits including improved circulation, reduced stress and anxiety and better sleep. Alzheimer's Society's Memory Walks, taking place throughout September, are a great way for people with and without dementia to get some exercise and to meet other people in your local community."

Actress Adele Silva will be taking part in Alzheimer's Society's first Memory Walk in Leeds this Saturday (5th September). She said: "I've experienced first-hand the devastating effect dementia has on families, and it saddens me to think people aren't aware of simple things they can do to reduce their risk of developing this terrible condition. Evidence has shown that taking regular exercise, eating a healthy balanced diet and not smoking can help prevent dementia and can also help people already living with the condition."

"This Saturday, I'll be taking part in Alzheimer's Society's Leeds Memory Walk and I'll be walking for my wonderful Nan, who had dementia, along with thousands of people walking for their loved ones. It's a great way to raise vital funds to support others living with the condition."

Additional YouGov Stats London:

- The poll finds that 24% of Londoners take part in less than 30 minutes of exercise per week, while 12% do no exercise whatsoever
- Only 32% recognised that regular exercise and physical activity can have a significant impact on reducing the risk of developing dementia

- 81% recognised that regular exercise can have a significant impact on improving overall fitness and maintaining a healthy lifestyle
- 77% said they thought regular exercise had a significant impact on weight loss
- 65% said they felt exercise could have a significant impact on preventing heart disease
- 54% recognised that exercise can reduce the likelihood of developing diabetes

Activities such as brisk walking can contribute to the total weekly exercise recommended by the NHS. Taking part in an Alzheimer's Society Memory Walk is a great way to get active and raise money to help support research and vital services for people living with dementia. Alzheimer's Society's Memory Walks are taking place across England, Wales and Northern Ireland throughout September. To sign up to your nearest walk and start fundraising, visit memorywalk.org.uk

Alzheimer's Society provides a range of services to support people living with dementia. Call the national helpline on 0300 222 1122 or email helpline@alzheimers.org.uk. For more information about Alzheimer's Society visit www.alzheimers.org.uk.

Thatched House back with big plans for community

The Thatched House is back with its old landlord, a man with plans to put the pub at the heart of the community again.

Tom Gavaghan has returned to the pub in Dalling Road, Hammersmith, since leaving after six years in charge in 2008.

It had been known as the Butcher's Hook in his absence but he said it was important to bring the historic name back.

"It's about bringing the Thatched House story back. It's been here for the past 160 years," Tom said.

"It had lost its identity. I want it waving its flag as part of the community again. That's what pubs are: they're the heart of the community, they're landmarks, they're where people celebrate and commiserate and share their stories. It's got to be part of the community, that's what we do."

One of Tom's ideas to build strong community ties is to hold a Me Market on the first Saturday of every month where people can come and talk about what they do and share ideas.

He said: "If people have got a book they can talk about it, or if they're a busker or an actor... There are so many skills, so much talent out there and pubs are the place to show that off."

The first Me Market is planned for early October and Tom is working on other ideas to reach out to the community and bring people together, including a Christmas street party.

"This industry doesn't always have to be about making money, that comes further down the line," he said.

His approach certainly seems to work, The Andover Arms in Aldensley Road, Hammersmith, which he's owned since 2007, was named Fuller's Pub of the Year last year and was recently the number two pub to visit on the Trip Advisor website.

He is now in charge of three pubs; Tom took over the Lord Palmerston in Tufnell Park in April, before taking on the Thatched House in July. He is also setting up PubDoctor.com which helps struggling and new landlords make successes of their pubs.

"It's not just a job it's a lifestyle. You've got to absolutely love it," Tom said.

150 extra reception places provided

As part of Hounslow Council's extensive schools expansion programme, this September there are 150 extra places available for reception children.

These new reception classes are made up of two new forms of entry at Hounslow Heath Infant and Nursery School, and one additional form of entry at St Paul's Church of England Primary School, St Mary's Catholic Primary School, and Beavers Community Primary School. This will ultimately result in 1,050 permanent new school places, as the school buildings now have the capacity for these extra 30 students as they move up through each year.

In the next phase of the council's expansion programme, an additional seven forms of entry for primary school places will be delivered by 2020. The proposals to meet this are through the building of two new Free Schools and the expansion of Wellington Primary School by two forms of entry.

Councillor Tom Bruce, Cabinet Member for Education and Children's Services, Hounslow Council, said: "We're determined to make sure every child in the borough receives the best education possible, and like most London boroughs we have a rapidly growing school-age population. I'm delighted that we are able to provide these extra places for the start of the new school year.

"Given the current government policy we are unable to build new local authority schools. So as well as the expansion programme we are also working with the Education Funding Agency to ensure that any Free Schools which come to the borough are built in areas where school places are most needed."

According to this month's Do the Maths 2015 report by London Councils, pupils in London face a growing funding gap with 78,000 secondary and 34,000 more primary places needed across the capital by 2020.

Heathrow's new approach on expansion meets noise, carbon and air quality targets

Heathrow's plan "doesn't force a choice between the environment and the economy - it will deliver for both"

Heathrow has set out how its plans for expansion are compatible with carbon emissions targets, air quality limits and will result in fewer people being affected by noise than today.

The Environmental Audit Committee is conducting an inquiry into the implications for Government commitments on carbon emissions, air quality and noise should the Airports Commission's recommendation of a third runway at Heathrow Airport be adopted.

Responding to the consultation, Heathrow illustrated how an improved runway design from that rejected in 2010 maximises the level of respite that can be provided to local communities, whilst reducing the number of people affected by significant noise by at least 200,000. The plans also ensure there are no more airport-related vehicles on the road than there are today - helping to make sure that air quality limits are not exceeded.

It's an approach which has been endorsed by the independent Airports Commission, who unanimously concluded in July this year that a third runway should be built at Heathrow. On carbon emissions, the Commission confirmed that Heathrow was compatible with the government's target of 37.5MtCO2 emissions from aviation by 2050, and that: "Heathrow's location and its much greater public transport connectivity (both locally and to the country as a whole) makes it the most efficient location in terms of carbon emissions due to surface access."

On noise, the Commission found that an expanded Heathrow can be better than today, and that "a bigger Heathrow would not inflict more noise nuisance on more people than it does today." The Airports Commission also confirmed that Heathrow expansion can be delivered within air quality limits, whilst Heathrow is confident that it can deliver emissions reductions targets surpassing the conservative calculations prepared by the Commission. Taken in total, the measures mean that Heathrow's plan is fair and deliverable, balancing the airport's critical role in helping British businesses compete for global growth and supporting a recovery built on exports, skills and investment, with the concerns of those living nearby.

It will also give the airport the ability to act as a catalyst for environmental innovation, fast tracking research and development. Heathrow already hosts the world's largest single site car sharing scheme, has the UK's only free airport public transport travel zone and the UK's first publicly accessible hydrogen refuelling site.

Matt Gorman, Director of Sustainability, said:

"This is a plan which doesn't force a choice between the environment and the economy - it will deliver for both. We have gone back to the drawing board, designed an improved approach and put forward a proposal for expansion unanimously recommended by the Airports Commission. A bigger Heathrow will be a better Heathrow for our local communities, compatible with carbon emissions targets, air quality limits and with fewer people impacted by noise than today."

Gunnersbury Park regeneration - Community Interest Company formed

The regeneration of one of London's most popular parks reached another milestone this month when a new management company was formally incorporated to oversee the long-term development of Gunnersbury Park and Museum in Brentford.

The 72-hectare park, which was originally purchased for the nation from the Rothchild family, has been open to the public since 1926 and major restoration work is now underway, thanks to funding from the adjoining local authorities - Ealing and Hounslow - and from the Heritage Lottery fund. Together, these organisations have been exploring the best arrangements for managing the estate and to secure its long-term success.

A 2014 review of the options recommended that a(CIC) be established to take responsibility for the park and museum. A CIC provides freedom for the park to operate in a commercial manner, while at the same time maintaining accountability through the two councils currently managing Gunnersbury. And, in addition to a number of financial advantages, it allows local residents an opportunity to be in the driving seats on operational matters.

Councillor Ed Mayne, Hounslow Council's Cabinet Member for Public Health and Leisure, explains: "Gunnersbury is one of West London's best-loved parks and it's vitally important that we make sure that we support the investment that is being made in restoration with a management organisation that can successfully take it into the 21st century."

Ealing Council's leader, Councillor Julian Bell, said: "The future of the park will be more secure now, with decisions being made quicker allowing the park's potential to be maximised. The new management approach also means the park's funding will be protected from any changes in the budgets the council gets going forward and they can reinvest any surplus funds the park generates."

40 years on - Lynne Weedon murder appeal

Lynne was discovered by a local school caretaker whose house overlooked the sub-station. Despite the horrific nature of her injuries, she was still alive when police and ambulance arrived at the scene.

Lynne Weedon

However, she never regained consciousness and died at West Middlesex Hospital a week later on 10 September 1975. The cause of death was a single blow to the head - her skull had been smashed with a heavy blunt instrument, which was never recovered.

In July 2006, following a review and advances in technology, it was determined the same DNA found on Lynne had also been found in the murder of Eve Stratford, and the two investigations were linked.

Eve died of neck injuries on Tuesday, 18 March 1975, aged 21. She was last seen by witnesses walking near her home in Lyndhurst Drive, Leyton, E10, at 15:58hrs. It was a snowy day and she appeared to be walking alone.

At 16:30hrs an occupant in another flat at the converted house in Lyndhurst Drive heard the voices of a man and a woman in conversation. A short while later the witness recalled hearing a loud thud noise coming from Eve's first-floor flat. Her body was discovered by her boyfriend at 17:20hrs in the bedroom.

Eve, who worked as a bunny could lead us to the killer.

"One phone call to the incident room could be all that it takes to bring two bereaved families closer to some closure or justice.

"I urge you to examine your conscience and if you are wavering on making that call, think of Eve's family who have now passed away and Lynne's parents who are in their 80s and have endured 40 dreadful years not knowing who murdered their daughter. Perhaps the person who killed Lynne and Eve confided in you? Please do not keep their secret for a day longer and come forward."

It is likely the suspect for both murders is now in his 60s or 70s.

girl, had a nylon stocking tied around one ankle and a scarf around her hands. Her neck had been cut between eight and 12 times. A post-mortem examination held at Walthamstow Mortuary gave cause of death as knife wounds to the throat. There was no sign of forced entry to the flat and no weapon was ever recovered.

The murders remain unsolved despite extensive enquiries but officers hope the passage of time may now encourage someone to come forward with information.

A £40,000 reward for information leading to the identification, arrest and prosecution of the person or people responsible for the murders remains on offer.

Investigating officer Detective Chief Inspector Noel McHugh, from the Homicide and Major Crime Command (HMCC), said: "An extraordinary amount of time has passed since Lynne and Eve were murdered, and I am still confident that someone out there has information which Detectives are keeping an open mind but have previously said it is possible the killer knew his victims, particularly Eve who had a huge circle of friends and acquaintances.

It is also thought the murderer had knowledge of the Hounslow area - the alleyway and sub-station are away from busy areas. It appears the motive was sexual - Lynne had been raped, and it is likely Eve had also been raped although officers have not been able to rule out consensual sex.

Anyone with information is asked to call the incident room on 020 8785 8099 or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Gearing up for Ealing Half Marathon

Ealing Council is preparing for the return of the award winning Ealing Half Marathon on Sunday, 27 September 2015.

With only a few places left, the marathon will attract up to 7,000 runners, thousands of spectators and hundreds of volunteers to the borough to take part and support the race. Many of the runners are raising money for charity. Starting in Lammas Park at 9am, the 13.1 mile course will cover parts of Montpelier, Pitshanger, Central Ealing and Hanwell before returning to Lammas Park via Uxbridge Road.

Working with the event organisers the council will help minimise disruption to residents. To ensure the safety of participants and spectators, all the roads that the event passes through will be closed to traffic at some stage during the event.

There will be a rolling road closure in operation and where possible the road will be re-opened 30 minutes after the last runner has passed by. The first roads will close from 8am on the day of the event and it is expected that all roads will re-open by 1pm. Buses that operate in the area will be on diversion from 7.30am until 1pm on the day of the event.

Councillor Julian Bell, leader of Ealing Council, said: "The Ealing Half Marathon is a great community event for the borough. I'm pleased we are able to support it for a fourth year, working with race organisers to minimise disruptions to residents and provide a challenging course for participants. It's a fantastic opportunity for residents to be active in their local area while raising money and awareness for chosen charities. If you're not one of the thousands taking part, I encourage you to come forward and take up opportunities to help out on race day."

The council has written to residents who will be affected by road closures, so they can plan ahead for the day. Road signs are also on display. Some disruption to local traffic should be expected and residents are advised to check the course route, and anticipated road closure times for their area.

Westfield shoppers could help shape the future of medicine, says NHS doctor

Doctors from Imperial College Healthcare NHS Trust are asking Westfield shoppers to take part in medical research - and help change someone's life.

From helping a tiny baby take their first breaths, to providing treatments and support to a family coping with dementia, research underpins medicine across all ages. However this research is only made possible with the participation of patients and the public.

This research can involve anything from taking a new type of treatment, to filling in a questionnaire about your health.

On Friday September 18th, NHS doctors and nurses from the trust, which includes Charing Cross and St Mary's Hospital, will be at Westfield London, Shepherd's Bush, talking to shoppers about the fantastic, life-changing research that takes place in the NHS - and how they can get involved.

Dr Sonya Abraham, a consultant from Imperial College Healthcare NHS Trust said: "Research is an everyday part of the NHS, and is crucial to developing better treatments for patients, and keeping people healthy. However, this crucial research can only take place with the help of patients and the public. And by taking part in research you are helping future generations beat diseases such as arthritis, cancer, diabetes and dementia."

Dukes Meadows: Council to consider 'More Effective' ways of dealing with travellers Hounslow Council leader Steve Curran says the council needs to consider more 'effective ways' of dealing with unlawful occupation of land by travellers. Over the summer, Dukes Meadows has had a number of families from the travelling community pitching up and occupying land in and around its grounds.

Cllr Curran said, "Regular users of Duke's Meadow will be aware that we have had a number of difficulties this summer in this much-loved park. In particular we experienced incursions by travellers and an increased level of reports of anti-social behaviour which have generated many complaints.

"We believe that we need to consider more effective methods of dealing with such problems and to build on the excellent work that the Dukes Meadows Trust have done to revitalise the parklands.

"Our aim at the Chiswick Area Forum on 8 September is simply to introduce our intention to draw up a masterplan for increasing use of the park and to establish what improvements are required and the ways we can fund them.

We are firmly committed to developing the masterplan with the local community - including local councillors and the Dukes Meadow Trust. This is the start of the discussion not the end and we intend to engage the Trust in this process, including the selection and brief for the masterplanners.

"Dukes Meadows is an incredible asset for our residents and we will ensure that everyone who has an interest will have their say."

HOUNSLOW COUNCIL NEWS.

For those of you that live in the Hounslow Council area of Chiswick...

The search for the Apprentice 2015 is on!

This year the council is offering around 30 apprenticeship places for young people looking for a vibrant alternative to higher education. Apprenticeships are available in a range of departments from ICT to engineering. Candidates are being urged not to delay in applying for the coveted trainee posts, with deadlines looming. Successful applicants will start work later this year.

Apprenticeships offer people the chance to earn while they learn, with workers getting invaluable workforce experience. As well as getting paid, apprentices study for qualifications which can help them further their careers. Successful applicants enjoy a raft of benefits including holiday pay, the chance to earn NVQ qualifications and, in some cases, university foundation year qualifications.

The placements last for between one and four years, depending on the role. Simone Harrington is coming to the end of a year-long apprenticeship at Hounslow

Council and has just passed an NVQ qualification.

She has so impressed staff that she has earned a place as a finalist in the London Councils Best Contribution by a New Apprentice award. She will find out whether she has won the coveted title at a glitzy ceremony at Canary Wharf later this month.

The 18-year-old has been given another year's contract with the council working as a business support officer. She said: "It's been a great year and I'm really pleased to be asked to stay on. I went to college after finishing school but I just had absolutely no idea what I wanted to do so I sort of jumped around from course to course."

"But the apprenticeship has been perfect for me. I have friends who have been to university and then just come back and work in the same shop where they worked before."

"With an apprenticeship you earn money rather than running up debts and I really like it here. It's definitely where I want to be. I have had amazing support, especially from my manager Theresa Gragoussian.

Councillor Sue Sampson, Cabinet Member for Communities, Hounslow Council, said: "My congratulations to Simone - making it to the finals of a regional competition is a real achievement."

"The fact that she's staying on at the council is testimony to how hard she's worked."

"I would encourage anyone who does not want to go down the higher education route into work to strongly consider applying to become a Hounslow Council apprentice. It improves your skills, you can earn a wage, get formal qualifications and can lead to some exciting career prospects."

To find out more information about these posts, please contact Apprenticeship Coordinator Tomi Moronkola at tomi.moronkola@hounslow.gov.uk or call 020 8583 6036. Applications can also be made online at www.hounslow.gov.uk/index/jobs.htm

Council apologises for Lionel Road Development letter error

Residents living around the proposed Lionel Road development site in Brentford for Brentford FC's new stadium and new homes were sent a consultation letter by the council this week.

However, due to an error by the council's external printers, only half the letter was printed.

Residents will now receive a new letter next week (w/c 7 September), which includes an extended deadline for any responses to the consultation.

Councillor Steve Curran, Leader of Hounslow Council, said: "We are very sorry about this. I am really angry about it. We will be seeking full compensation for the cost of having to send the letter out again. It is not acceptable."

Don't let a child miss out on education

Hounslow Council is launching a community-wide bid to ensure all young people are receiving a suitable education. Children missing education are those aged five to 16 who are not on a school roll or receiving an alternative education and who have been out of any form of education for a period of four weeks or more. Recent reports indicate that children missing out on education may be facing an increased risk of harm or exploitation, including forced marriage, genital mutilation, sexual exploitation and radicalisation.

This is in addition to the damaging consequences of a missed or disrupted education on a child's academic success and future employment prospects.

Councillor Tom Bruce, Houn-

slow Council's Cabinet Member for Education and Children's Services, said: "As a local authority, it's our responsibility to make sure that all school aged children are receiving a good education so they can get the best possible start in life."

"By making this a community wide issue we hope to draw upon the support of parents and families within Hounslow and to spread the message of the importance of education so that every child has the opportunity to fulfil their potential."

If you are concerned about a child who is not in education or you are not sure if they are, please contact the children missing education officer on 020 8583 2768 or email cme@hounslow.gov.uk

EALING COUNCIL NEWS.

For those of you that live in the Ealing Council area of Chiswick...

Ealing shortlisted for five transport awards

Ealing Council has been shortlisted in five categories in the National Transport Awards, including Local Authority of the Year.

Competing with more than 360 other entries, the council made the final shortlist in the following five categories:

- Local Authority of the Year

- Road Safety, Traffic Management and Enforcement (Cycle Safety Shield)

- Excellence in Cycling and Walking (Biking Schools)

- Contribution to Sustainable Transport (Biking Schools)

- Excellence in Technology (Cycle Safety Shield)

Two of the nominations were for the council's innovative work to develop the use of the Cycle Safety Shield - a collision avoidance system that the council has fitted to its HGVs to alert drivers if cyclists, pedestrians or motorcyclists are in danger.

The council is the first organisation to fit the system, powered by Mobileye, to all its vehicles. The council's highway maintenance company, Murrill Construction Ltd, has also fitted the system to all its vehicles and waste and recycling contractors Amey have agreed to do the same.

The Biking Schools programme also secured the borough's place in two more categories. The programme, which is the first of its kind in London, means all pupils at participating schools undertake compulsory cycle training. A cycling coach visits the school each week to provide help and advice, holding cycle maintenance sessions, organising bike rides and running after school clubs and competitions.

Cabinet member for transport, environment and leisure, Councillor Bassam Mahfouz, said: "It's an honour for us to be shortlisted in so many categories for these prestigious awards. Our biking schools programme is getting children and their families active, proving to be transformational; whilst the innovative Cycle Safety Shield is a vital piece of kit making a world of difference in creating safer streets for pedestrians, cyclists and other road users."

The winners of the awards will be announced at an event in London on Thursday, 8 October. The full shortlist is available at: www.transport-timesevents.co.uk

Ealing carers receive discounts on sports and leisure

Ealing Council has announced the extension of its leisure pass to local people with caring responsibilities, adding it to the benefits it offers those who give unpaid care to friends and family in the borough.

The leisure pass gives discounts of up to 50% for adults and 33% for children in the borough's sports and leisure centres. Carers with a leisure pass will also be able to pay reduced fees at Ealing's public golf courses, Will to Win tennis in Pitshanger Park and Eight Level Health and Fitness, Southall.

In addition, pass holders receive concessions on CDs, talking books and language course hire at the borough's libraries, as well as a reduced rate for book reservations. Leisure passes are already available to senior citizens, those on income support or unemployment benefit (six month pass only) and employee support allowance. Full-time students also benefit; as do adult and child dependents of leisure pass holders.

Annual passes cost £4.10 for an adult pass and £2.05 for a child pass. Applications should be made in person at any facility managed by Everyone Active. The full list of facilities managed by Everyone Active is available at www.ealing.gov.uk/leisure-pass.

Those applying as carers must either produce a letter from the Department of Work and Pensions if they are in receipt of a carers benefit, or a letter from Ealing adult social services confirming their role as a carer.

Councillor Hitesh Tailor, cabinet member for health and adults services, said: "I am delighted to announce this latest support from Ealing Council. I fully recognise what carers give up to look after their loved ones and this can result in financial and emotional pressures. Extending the leisure pass in this way is just one of the ways that we can help and say thank you for everything that they do.

"As well as the leisure pass, Ealing Council offers a range of other support to eligible carers, such as respite care, a discount on council tax, a special parking permit and access to Ealing's handyperson scheme. Carers do a lot for Ealing and I am pleased that Ealing can give something back to them."

For more information on the support and benefits available to carers in Ealing, go to www.ealing.gov.uk/carers, email sscallcentre@ealing.gov.uk or call 020 8825 8000.

Get composting!

Residents are being reminded about the benefits of composting and discounts available for compost bins this summer.

Autumn is an excellent time to compost. Grass cuttings, fallen fruit and prunings can all be recycled over the coming months to produce compost which is ideal for spring planting.

And Ealing Council, in partnership with Straight Plc, is offering residents reduced prices on compost bins. Prices start at £17.68 plus delivery. Wormeries, water butts and kitchen caddies are also available. Telephone 0845 130 60 90 for further details or visit www.ealing.getcomposting.com

It is important to have a good mixture of materials to make a good quality compost. As well as green garden waste, fruit and vegetable peelings; egg shells, tea bags, pet hair, and even shredded paper can be composted. To make good compost, try to aim for a 50/50 mix of green and brown.

Councillor Bassam Mahfouz, cabinet member for transport, environment and leisure, said: "Composting is a very environmentally friendly way of disposing of your garden prunings and cuttings, as well as vegetable peelings. It's an inexpensive and natural process and does wonders for gardens.

"Currently, as much as one third of all black bag tonnage is food waste and last year we wasted £8million on landfill charges. I am asking residents to do their bit to help bring this cost down by recycling, composting and using our weekly food waste collection. Together, this will help to reduce the non-recyclable waste we pay to dispose of each year, saving money and helping the environment."

Ealing Council's food waste collection service will stay weekly when the refuse and recycling service switches to alternate weekly collections next spring.

Ealing Council also offers a fortnightly chargeable garden waste collection. The scheme runs from 1 April to 31 March and has an annual charge of £60 (with a 25% discount for residents who are over 65). Subscriptions from 1 October to 31 March are charged a discounted rate of £45.

For more information on the garden waste scheme, our food waste collection service and composting visit www.ealing.gov.uk/recycling.

LOCAL NEWS - Ruth Cadbury MP.

End of summer update

Heathrow: The threat of an additional runway is perhaps the most significant issue for our area – and one that is a step closer, but by no means a done deal. The Davies Commission report was released in July saying that all three options are deliverable but that Heathrow is preferable. My views are set out in an article for “Progress” magazine that (if you are on-line) you can see here. The final decision will be made by Cameron, apparently before Christmas. A cross-party campaign is building up, led by our group of West London MPs and the campaign groups including HACAN. Our letter to the PM calling him to re-open the commission on the flawed area of air quality was published in the Evening Standard.

With HACAN we have produced a leaflet that will go door-to-door in each borough, with a map showing how the new flight paths will affect each area and announcing the big London rally taking place on Saturday 10th October. The leaflet delivery costs money that HACAN doesn't have so support is welcome. I have contributed towards this from my “pay increase”. You can help too by sending a cheque to ‘HACAN No Third Runway’, 13 Stockwell Road, London SW9 9AU. Or a Direct Bank Transfer to Barclays. Account name: HACAN Sort Code: 20 72 17. A/c no: 83261271 It helps HACAN to have your address and your email address.

NHS Issues: Concerns about hospital changes in West London continue, and with four other West London Labour MP's, I met Jane Ellison the Health Minister and senior NHS officials in July to express our concern about the implications of the continuing programme to downgrade the A&Es at Charing Cross and Ealing and move services to St Mary's and other sites. Jeremy Hunt still refuses to meet MPs representing affected constituencies. As things stand the plans are going ahead but the timetable is slipping. The business case for the whole “Shaping a Healthier Future” project looks risky as there does not appear to be the capital or revenue costs to make it work.

Hospitals are by no means the only health issue around and I have had really useful meetings with the Clinical Commissioning Group (the GPs holding the local health budget), West Middlesex Hospital, the Community Mental Health Trust and Healthwatch Hounslow. There is lots of work going on to keep older and frail people from spending time in, or returning to hospital, unnecessarily, through community-based joint work between medical and social care services. It's also helpful to know that the desperately under-funded mental health service here is to get a significant budget uplift. It remains to be seen, however, whether this will be enough. On September 1st the West Middlesex Hospital was taken over by Chelsea and Westminster Hospital. The proposal has been to Hounslow and Hammersmith Council Scrutiny committees and there appears to be no risk that services will be lost from West Mid, in fact the opposite as there is more physical room there than at Chelsea to expand services. Nevertheless I will continue to monitor the situation, to ensure that promises are kept and that West Mid does not become the “poor relation”.

Cycling: My role as co-chair of the All-Party Cycling Group meant I met the Prime Minister following yet another death-by-lorry to discuss the issue of cycle safety in our towns and cities. We are seeking enforcement of existing safety regulation for lorries, better cab design but most importantly, peak hour lorry bans. He was definitely listening and spoke to the Secretary of State for Transport immediately afterwards. This will be a key issue for our autumn programme of meetings. Mayor of London, Boris Johnson released a number of measures on September 1st including a ban on left-turns at key junctions. It's a start, but still not involving the ban.

Housing: It will come as no surprise that Housing problems top the list of issues that constituents bring to my surgeries, brought about by an absolute shortage of suitable affordable housing and the withdrawal of housing benefit and tax credits. Many working families can no longer afford to pay local rents and they join the many sick and disabled people who are being evicted and having to move either a long way away, or to wholly unsuitable housing. I attended a debate in Westminster on the housing crisis in London and I am working with Hounslow Councillors on solutions, including to increase the number of affordable homes delivered in new developments. It goes without saying that I am wholly opposed to the Government proposal to force the Right-to-Buy on Housing Associations as it will further diminish the stock of affordable housing but the scheme is also expected to force Councils to sell their most valuable homes when they fall vacant. Complete madness.

Community events and meetings: Over the last couple of months I have been to a host of wonderful community events; school, community and street fairs, festivals; Iftar and Eid meals and the London Mela. I've cycled to central London with fellow Hounslow Cycling Campaign members for Ride London, met politicians and diplomats from Pakistan, Somalia, the Netherlands and India, welcomed the Irish Guards to Hounslow barracks, and celebrated Brompton Bikes Queen's award for Industry. I have met community volunteers at the British Heart Foundation shop, Super Saturday of Sport, Brentford Festival, Friends of Beaversfield Park and celebrated the 30th anniversary of Gunnersbury Triangle nature reserve. I have also met local residents' campaigners from Brent Lea, Keep Osterley Green, Great West Quarter and Mogden.

Meeting residents: I go out every other weekend, often with local Councillors, meeting voters on their doorsteps and following up the issues they raise with me. These range from rubbish and potholes, to Heathrow noise and the Refugee crisis. I've not been able to sort all of the problems immediately although we have had some victories with grotspots being cleared up and people in need of help getting the right support.

Labour Leadership elections and Mayoral selection: I am supporting Yvette Cooper because she has the best chance of being Labour's next Prime Minister, Stella Creasy because of her ability to turn local campaigns such as pay-day loans, into legislative success and Sadiq Khan, because like me, he opposes the third runway at Heathrow and that will be the biggest issue in the Mayoral election.

MP's Office: We are seeking a suitable space in the constituency to use as an office and place to meet constituents, meanwhile my staff are all based in Westminster. I hold fortnightly surgeries in different venues, where I see people who have contacted my office and would like to meet me.

I hope you find this update helpful, feel free to share with friends who may not see it and do contact me if you have any comments or I can help.

Ruth joins Tania Mathias in TideFest event for 'London's River'

MP Dr Tania Mathias

Two newly elected West London MPs will be the guests of honour at this year's TideFest to be held along the Tidal Thames on September 20th. Wildlife organisations, river and environmental groups and community associations have invited Brentford and Isleworth MP Ruth Cadbury (Lab) and Twickenham MP Dr Tania Mathias (Con) to this second, bigger TideFest where they will be taking part in some of the wide array of activities on offer and helping out with the prize giving. TideFest is a new River Thames event which took place for the first time last year on World Rivers Day to highlight the recreational importance of the Thames to Londoners. TideFest 2015 takes place at Strand on the Green, Chiswick, Kew and at other locations along the Tideway. TideFest is part of the month long Totally Thames festival and is supported by the Thames Tunnel Now Coalition, Thames Tideway Tunnel and Thames Water. The activities are planned to run from 10am – 6pm and are open to all.

- The marquee on the riverside embankment at Strand on the Green will host displays on the Thames Tideway, historical artefacts collected by local archivists, painting by local artists, children's activities, live fish tanks and an information point with material available from environmental and wildlife groups and the Port of London Authority.
- Visitors will also be able to benefit from discounted or free access to three great West London attractions by simply turning up with a TideFest programme or mentioning TideFest when booking. The discounts are available at the popular London Wetland Centre in Barnes and the award winning London Museum of Water and Steam in Brentford whilst Thames Water have agreed to open the doors to their internationally important wetland nature reserve at Kempton.
- Stand Up Paddleboarding. Organised by Active 360 with pre-booked sessions from 11am for those new to paddleboarding, an Eco tour from Kew to Hammersmith and an evening river tour to Richmond. There will be a race at Strand on the Green at 4.30pm.
- Kayak Taster Sessions by Edge Paddling where newcomers can simply turn up from 11am and try kayaking with qualified coaches.
- The prestigious Thames Tideway Angling Championship takes place from 9.30am to 2.30pm at Strand on the Green and Barnes. 50 top anglers from across the UK will be taking part and spectators are welcome.
- On the Foreshore there will be children's activities including river dipping, seine netting, water testing and games designed to explain and increase understanding of what's going on in the river run by the environmental charity Thames 21. A series of highly informative Archaeological Walks and tour of Oliver's Island will be held in the afternoon from 12 noon onwards at Strand on the Green.

• The London Wildlife Trust is once again offering people a rare chance to visit their nature reserve on Isleworth Ait. (Further details to be announced)

• At 6pm the SoTG Sailing Club hold their annual TideFest Challenge Trophy competition. Spectators welcome.

• The River Thames Society is organising four one hour boat trips around the Tideway islands leaving from Kew Pier on the historic Thames launch the Windrush. Guided commentary included. Trips leave at 11am, 12.15, 1.30 and 2.45 (advance booking required)

Ruth Cadbury MP said: “Along with thousands of local residents, I understand the importance of the Thames. I run along it and I have learnt to Kayak down it. Its importance to my constituents and the entire city cannot be underestimated. For centuries the Thames helped build the London economy. It is great that so many organisations have come together to celebrate the potential of the Thames and to press for a cleaner river so future generations can benefit. The Thames is a green lung for London, and we must protect and value it.”

“I've lived by the River Thames since I was a child and I am a big supporter of scientists in my constituency of Twickenham who monitor the River Crane. I am passionate about the wildlife that I see every day and I am a frequent visitor of the Swan Sanctuary. The river is the life force running through our city and it will always be important to me as a resident and a London MP. I am delighted to support this celebration of the Thames and all it offers us.”

TideFest organiser Martin Salter from the Angling Trust said: “This is an event that keeps on growing and which aims to help reconnect Londoners with their river. The Thames holds 120 different species of fish and is home to a tremendous array of birds and other wildlife yet far too few people are aware of what an amazing resource we have on our doorsteps. We are particularly pleased this year to be welcoming our two local MPs both of whom have a keen interest in the health of the river.”

MONEY MATTERS.

Money Matters with Dr P Singh

Money Matters special feature: equity options for turbulent markets

Holding shares exposes investors to the risk of substantial loss of their investment if the share price plummets.

Markets correct and bubbles burst – sometimes spectacularly as we saw in the global crisis of 2007, and in China, and more recently, substantial price declines in UK equity markets. Often these shifts are accompanied by heightened volatility in equity prices.

Equity losses are also the consequence of all-too-frequent corporate scandals and corporate mismanagement. Just remember Tesco, RBS, CPP, Yell and so on. Unlike fat cat directors abandoning their sinking corporate ship with lucrative pay-offs, shareholders often go down with it, taking their worthless shares with them.

Options in shares offer a way for shareholders to limit their loss from volatile and declining share prices. They give holders of options the right, but not the obligation, to sell their shares at a previously agreed price. For example, Tesco shares were trading at around £3 in June 2014, but had sunk to around £1.50 by December.

A holding of say 10000 shares would have been worth £30000 in June, but would have fallen to just £15000 in December, a loss of half their value. An investor could have protected against this loss by buying put options, with a strike price of £3.00.

These puts would have enabled him to sell his shares for £3 in December even though his Tesco's shares had sunk to a market price of £1.50. This 50% gain in the value of his put options would have offset the 50% loss in the value of his shares, so in aggregate, he would have lost nothing by the fall in the market price of his shares from £3.00 to £1.50

Options are therefore analogous to insurance, and not surprisingly, like insurance, they require the payment of a premium by the buyer for protection.

Buyers of protection can also protect against the risk of share prices rising, by buying call options.

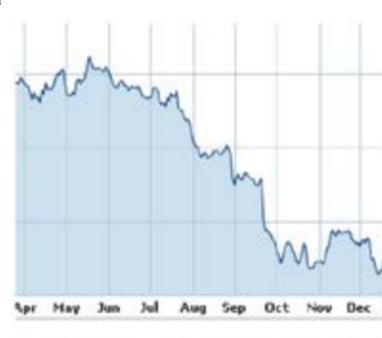

Call options give prospective share buyers the right, but not the obligation, to buy shares at the lower share price instead of the higher share price. For example, assume it's December 2014 and Tesco's shares are at £1.50 each. You think they have hit rock bottom so now is a good time to buy but you don't have enough money yet to invest. You therefore decide to buy a call option giving you the right not the obligation, to buy 10000 shares at any time during the next three months at £1.50 each.

In early March 2015, you have the necessary funds so you buy 10000 Tesco shares at the option price of £1.50. The market price per share has risen to £2.50. At this price, you could buy shares at £1.50 under the terms of the call option, then immediately sell them at £2.50 so bag yourself a £1 profit per share, giving you an instant return on your investment of £10000, less the cost of the call option.

Instead of buying, options can be sold, providing premium income. Selling options has its risks however - in the same way an insurance company selling insurance finds that it must pay out more on claims than it received in premium income.

One way to protect against this risk is to hold the underlying shares on which you sell options. For example, if you sell a March 2015 call option on 10000 Tesco shares (that you own) giving the holder the right to buy shares from you at £1.50, you will receive premium (say 10p per share). As long as the share price remains below £1.50 a share, you will keep the premium of £1000 (1000 x 10p) because it is cheaper for the option holder to buy Tesco shares in the market than off you.

If, however, Tesco shares rise, say to £2.50 each, the holder will claim 10000 shares off you and pay you only £1.50 for each one as agreed in the call option sale (paying you £15000 in total). If you did not hold these shares, you would have to buy them in the market at £2.50 each – a cost to you of £25000, and sell them to the option holder for £15000 (£1.50 per share as agreed in the option sale). You would then suffer a cash loss of £10000 less the £1000 option premium. Selling options “naked” (without the underlying shares) is therefore a dangerous strategy. Selling options whilst holding the underlying shares (covered option writing) is much safer.

Last year, Mike Ashley, used his company, Sports Direct, to sell a put on 23 million Tesco shares. The buyer of the put was the ubiquitous investment bank, Goldman Sachs. The premium paid, the period of the option, and the exercise price, were all undisclosed. What is known is Sports Direct had to pay Goldman Sachs for a fall in the value of 23 million Tesco shares – up to £43 million if the shares became worthless before the option expired. In the meantime, Ashley pocketed a substantial premium and will keep it as long as Tesco's share price is above the put exercise price. Ashley has in effect taken an upbeat view on the future direction of Tesco's shares. Selling a put option is therefore the equivalent of owning shares. The chart on the right shows his vision of Tesco's share price has not always been right in 2015.

To exercise their right to sell the Tesco shares, Goldman might have to wait until the option expires (a European style option) or they might be able to sell at any time prior to the option's expiry date (an American style option). Being able to exercise at any time gives Goldman a greater chance of exercising at a gain (and so of Ashley losing money) so American options command a higher premium.

Call and put options can be used in many combinations. For example, an iron condor is the purchase and sale of two pairs of puts and calls; a straddle is the sale or purchase of a put and a call pair at the same exercise; a call butterfly is the purchase and sale of two pairs of call options at three different strike prices.

Which option combination to use is often determined by the expectation of the future direction of a share and the volatility of its price, and whether the aim is to protect or speculate. For example, if a company's share price is expected to drop, a put would be bought as protection. To offset the cost of the put premium, a put could be sold. For additional income, a call option could be sold, and to hedge the risk of the naked call, a call could be bought (sounds a familiar combination? It's an iron condor).

Options exist for most large companies and for different time periods extending up to a couple of years or more into the future. They also exist for equity indices such as the FTSE100 and S&P 500, enabling option holders to benefit from market-wide movements in equity prices.

As we have seen, options are used as insurance. They can also be used to make money from speculation - gambling. Some call this euphemistically, educated guessing, but it's still gambling. It's quite possible that your fund manager is using equity options for speculation and/or hedging - without your knowledge. If they are competent, it might be safer financially for you to let them do this instead of you.

If you try yourself, it's essential you understand the risks and features of the options before you trade. There are many brokers who provide online options trading platforms, and they usually include a free dummy account where you can try out options trades before risking your own money.

Being brokers, they make money off you from every option you purchase or sell through them, and from the interest earned on money you must deposit with them to cover large trading losses you might incur. They also make a pile of money off you from the poor market order prices at which they execute your purchases and sales (relative to what they get themselves from market makers). Transaction costs must therefore be factored into the net gain or loss of all your trades, especially commissions as these can quickly mount in frequent trading.

Holding an option can achieve the same effect as holding a share but with the benefits of a much smaller cash outlay and a smaller capital loss if the share price plummets. Buying 10000 shares at £3 will cost £30000. Buying the shares using call options will cost just £3000 if an option is 30p per share. If the shares subsequently rise to £4, and you sell your entire holding, you will make a return of 33% on your investment. If you had used options instead, the £10000 gain on an outlay of £3000, would represent a return of 333% (ten times greater). This substantially higher return on capital invested using options is called leverage. It occurs because options enable you to buy a share worth more than your initial outlay, i.e., you have the right to a £3 share but pay just 30p (one tenth the share's value).

If the share price instead plummeted to £2, the loss on the share holding would be £10000, representing a loss on investment of 33%. If options to buy 10000 shares had been used instead, the loss would be limited to the premium paid - £3000. The option strategy would have cost less than 1/3rd of the share purchase strategy.

Options last for a limited time so will need to be renewed at their expiry with payment of a further premium – possibly a higher premium, whereas holding of corresponding shares is a one-off payment and they may be held for as long as you choose. Holding shares also has the benefit of paying dividends and voting rights (ordinary shares).

Using options has its advantages but so does direct holdings of shares. As is often the case, one needs to understand their relative advantages and disadvantages in achieving your personal investment strategy.

BEAUTY, FITNESS & HEALTH.

A day of Health Living

by Jane lawrenson

The studio at Barrecore

With holidays just around the corner, I decided to try a day of healthy living. Think lots of green juices, an exercise class and to top it all off a bit of a pamper.

In Chiswick we are spoilt for choice and I'm not adverse to a morning swim and a salad for lunch and the odd Yoga lesson. In fact I live quite a healthy lifestyle in general but my one fear is the exercise class! I'm just not one to be going to a class on a regular basis and I envy the toned women that I see in Chiswick High Road, knowing that they put the effort in to achieve that look. I guess I need a bit more discipline!

I decided to bite the bullet and try something a little different from Yoga and Pilates so I booked into Barrecore in Chiswick.

Turnham Green is home to the fourth barrecore London studio and gives West London residents local access to classes for the first time. Not only will regular barrecore classes allow them to achieve the famous strong and lean 'barre body', it will also bring about a sense of health and wellbeing that is unique to this practice.

Barrecore is a 60 minute class which gets results fast and is very popular with top models and celebrities. It improves posture and alignment no matter what your fitness level. Barrecore is intelligent exercise, integrating the fat-burning format of interval training with static stretches after each major muscle is worked.

There are ten different Barrecore classes, so after some friendly advice and as a beginner, I decided on barrecoreMIXED which is a low impact, full body, interval training program using isometric exercises alternated with stretching. Movements are done using your own body weight as resistance and/or small equipment and high repetition to overload the muscle and then stretched out to create a longer looking and lean physique.

After a workout why not let your beauty products carry on the good work? Have a refreshing shower with Weleda's new Arnica Sports Shower Gel (£7.95 from Health Stores, Whole Foods, Holland & Barrett etc) It contains lavender & Rosemary oil and revives after exercise, while the organic arnica soothes tired muscles. Follow it up with the Weleda's Arnica Massage Oil (£11.95) to ease weary limbs.

Clarins have great oils and washes for the body too. Try the Tonic Bath & Shower Concentrate; a concentrated cleansing treatment activates with the heat of a warm bath or shower—releasing the invigorating, aromatic virtues of Rosemary, Mint and Geranium and finish with Tonic Body Oil (£40:00) which firms and tones and smells like you have had a spa visit. Massage into damp skin after showering and let it get to work. Find the range at www.clarins.co.uk

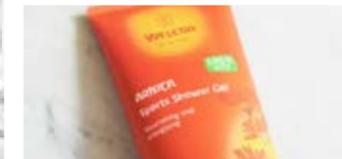

If, after a workout you enjoy a bit of pampering then I would recommend City Swish to you.

This is a great service offering a range of beauty, hair and massage services that visit you in your home or workplace. The girls are really friendly and they bring everything that they need with them.

I had the mani/pedi and it was better than I expected. Really good attention to detail and it's so nice to be sitting in your own front room- (especially after a pedicure!)

Just go to www.cityswish.com and book your preferred time, enter your details and tick which treatments you want to have. It's a simple as that. There are lots of treatments to choose from too! You could book a massage, waxing, tanning, mani/pedis and even hair appointments are all on there!

BUSTING THOSE BACK TO SCHOOL BUGS

Jane Lawrenson concludes her Summer Essentials

Yep, it's that time of year again. You send your darlings back to school with new kit and kaboodle and in return they can arrive home laden with all kinds of nasties. Two big problems on the return to school are nits (oh joy) and the various coughs and sneezes that are picked up in the first few weeks back.

I have found two new products that could help and although nobody can promise 100% protection from any of the bugs that go around, there is no harm in trying to prevent further outbreaks.

NYDA is a new head lice and nit treatment that claims to offer double protection against both. Anyone who has sat for hours, combing and re-combing only to find that seven days later new lice have hatched and you are now nothing more than a lice catcher, will appreciate that you HAVE to get rid of both the lice and the nits, or be doomed by the comb forever.

NYDA has no harmful insecticides and comes in a pump spray. Just apply to dry hair and comb through with the special comb included. Then leave on overnight or for at least 8 hours. Wash off with your normal shampoo and all lice and eggs should be gone.

Aggggg!!! Nit attack

Better You (www.betteryou.co.uk) is a great site for supplements that help to build resistance to germs. They sell a wide range of child friendly oral sprays that can help keep bugs at bay by building up the immune system. Their new Vit D daily spray is available in several strengths that are suitable from birth right up to adult, and also do a pregnancy nutritional spray with vitamins D, B1, B6 and folic acid. They are flavoured with peppermint oil, so taste good too. The childrens Daily Vitamin D is recommended for winter months, as we have less exposure to the sun and spend more time indoors. Boasting 100% natural ingredients and British made, these sprays can be easily taken by children who have problems with the taste of tablets and chews. The website is well worth a look if you want to supplement your diet.

Illegal outbuildings taken down by council

Outbuildings being used as unauthorised dwellings at the rear of three properties in East Acton have been demolished by Ealing Council as a direct result of a planning enforcement notice.

Council officers first discovered the illegal dwellings at the rear of numbers 2, 4 & 6 Sunningdale Avenue, W3, in November 2013. The landlord, Sofiane Belbega, was subsequently served with a planning enforcement notice requiring the three units to be demolished.

Mr Belbega appealed the enforcement notice and, following a public inquiry held in November 2014, the Planning Inspectorate dismissed the appeal giving him until 18 June 2015 to comply.

The deadline passed with no remedial action being taken and a formal warning was issued to Mr Belbega. He again failed to comply leaving the council with no choice but to send in bulldozers over the weekend of 22 August to demolish the three unauthorised buildings.

Council leader, Councillor Julian Bell, who has responsibility for planning, said: "Planning laws are in place to stop unlawful, dangerous structures being put up randomly and to protect neighbourhoods, as well as tenants. I am particularly pleased to see a really robust approach to enforcement being carried through and real consequences being felt by the unscrupulous landlord, as in this case."

As a result of the demolition carried out by the council, Mr Belbega will be sent a bill for the cost of the entire works. If the bill is not settled a charge will be placed on the properties which will incur interest until the outstanding money is paid in full.

In addition, during the appeal in November, it came to light that Mr Belbega was using the three main houses at Sunningdale Avenue as a hotel and flats. The council has since issued him with a further enforcement notice requiring these uses to stop, and an appeal against this notice is ongoing.

The search for the Apprentice 2015 is on!

This year Hounslow council is offering around 30 apprenticeship places for young people looking for a vibrant alternative to higher education. Apprenticeships are available in a range of departments from ICT to engineering.

Candidates are being urged not to delay in applying for the coveted trainee posts, with deadlines looming. Successful applicants will start work later this year. Apprenticeships offer people the chance to earn while they learn, with workers getting invaluable workforce experience. As well as getting paid, apprentices study for qualifications which can help them further their careers.

Successful applicants enjoy a raft of benefits including holiday pay, the chance to earn NVQ qualifications and, in some cases, university foundation year qualifications. The placements last for between one and four years, depending on the role. Simone Harrington is coming to the end of a year-long apprenticeship at Hounslow Council and has just passed an NVQ qualification. She has so impressed staff that she has earned a place as a finalist in the London Councils Best Contribution by a New Apprentice award. She will find out whether she has won the coveted title at a glitzy ceremony at Canary Wharf later this month. The 18-year-old has been given another year's contract with the council working as a business support officer. She said: "It's been a great year and I'm really pleased to be asked to stay on. I went to college after finishing school but I just had absolutely no idea what I wanted to do so I sort of jumped around from course to course. "But the apprenticeship has been perfect for me. I have friends who have been to university and then just come back and work in the same shop where they worked before. "With an apprenticeship you earn money rather than running up debts and I really like it here. It's definitely where I want to be. I have had amazing support, especially from my manager Theresa Gragousian. Councillor Sue Sampson, Cabinet Member for Communities, Hounslow Council, said: "My congratulations to Simone - making it to the finals of a regional competition is a real achievement. "The fact that she's staying on at the council is testimony to how hard she's worked. "I would encourage anyone who does not want to go down the higher education route into work to strongly consider applying to become a Hounslow Council apprentice. It improves your skills, you can earn a wage, get formal qualifications and can lead to some exciting career prospects." To find out more information about these posts, please contact Apprenticeship Coordinator Tomi Moronkola at tomoronkola@hounslow.gov.uk or call 020 8583 6036. Applications can also be made online at www.hounslow.gov.uk/index/jobs.htm

Recipes from the Villa

Cook the Tuscan way with the Villa di Geggiano's resident Chef Lazarin Kroni

This fortnightly feature invites you to cook a selection of mouthwatering recipes with the Villa di Geggiano's resident Chef Lazarin Kroni. In each issue Lazarin will suggest a recipe straight from Tuscany for you to try at home.

OCTOPUS WITH PURPLE POTATOES AND CRISPY PECORINO

To serve 4

Ingredients:

- Octopus: 1kg
- Onions: 2
- Carrot: 1
- Celery sticks: 2
- Oranges: 2
- Pecorino: 100g
- Purple potatoes: 200g
- Banana Shallot: 1
- Bay leaves: 4
- Vegetable stock: 1 cup
- Olive oil: 1 table spoon
- Salt & Pepper

To Prepare:

Add onions, carrots, celery, oranges and octopus to a large pot of boiling water and allow to boil for 50 minutes on a low heat. Allow to cool in the water without removing from the pot.

In the meantime prepare the potatoes and shallots. Peel and dice potatoes and chop shallots. Add 1 tablespoon of olive oil to a pan and add the shallot and the potatoes. Add a cup of vegetable stock, salt and pepper and allow to simmer for about 5 minutes until the potatoes are quite soft. Blend the contents of the pot to a nice creamy sauce.

Now prepare the crispy pecorino cracker: Take a tray with oven paper, divide the 100g pecorino to 4 portions and place in a pre heated oven at 180 degrees for 5 minute. Allow the pecorino just start to melt and take a gold colour. Remove and allow to chill until they became crispy.

Remove the cold octopus from the pot, drain and remove the head and only use the tentacles. Grill the tentacles. Now pre heat the purple sauce and you ready to serve.

Serving suggestion: Place purple source on a white plate and then place the octopus. Finish with the crispy pecorino.

Buon Appetito

Resident Recipes

This week, Chiswick resident Alice Millar's gluten free Pork Roast

Bacon-wrapped Pork Roast Recipe

Prep time: 5 minutes
 Cook time: 1 hour, 15 minutes
 Yield: Serves 4

Ingredients:

- 1 pork loin roast (about 1 1/2 pounds)
- Salt and pepper
- 1 Tbsp olive oil
- 2 Tbsp finely chopped fresh rosemary
- 1/4 lb bacon, thinly sliced
- 1 cup dry white wine

Method:

1 About an hour before you intend to cook the roast, take it out of the refrigerator and sprinkle it with salt on all sides. Let it sit at room temp to take the chill off before you roast it.

2 Pre-heat oven to 375°F (190°C). Pat pork roast dry with paper towels. Sprinkle it with pepper on all sides and again with a little salt (you likely wiped off much of the earlier sprinkle of salt when you patted it dry.) Heat a tablespoon of olive oil in a skillet on medium high heat. When the oil is shimmery hot, add the pork roast to the pan and brown it on all sides (don't move the roast until it has browned on one side). About 10 minutes. Remove the roast from the pan and set on a plate.

3 Rub the pork roast all over with minced fresh rosemary. Wrap the roast in bacon strips, overlapping the strips if necessary. Tie the roast up with kitchen string to hold the bacon strips in place.

4 Place the roast in a roasting pan and roast in the oven at 375°F (190°C), occasionally basting with the pan juices, until the internal temperature of the roast reaches 145°F (63°C) on a meat thermometer, about 35 to 40 minutes. When the roast has reached temperature, remove it from the oven and place it on a serving dish. Tent the roast with foil to keep it warm while it rests and while you make the pan sauce.

5 To make a sauce with the pan drippings, place the roasting pan on top of the stove on low heat. Pour white wine into the pan and start scraping up the browned bits from the bottom of the pan with a flat edged metal or wood spatula. Pour the scraped up drippings through a fine mesh sieve into a small saucepan. Use a metal spoon to skim off excess fat. Heat until simmering, then remove from heat and pour into a gravy boat. Serve the roast with the sauce from the pan drippings.

Loft Bed With Desk Underneath Equals A Happy And Comfy Child

Buying kids' beds can be tricky. Not only will they outgrow them eventually and want more age-appropriate furniture in the future but many kids are also very picky. To make things easier and much more cost effective, it's always best to stick to a bed that answers "what does he or she need"? And when the answer is space a loft bed with desk underneath is the best solution. These beds come in a variety of sizes and styles that are perfect for children's rooms.

Beds are of course a necessity for every child however it is not necessary that your child outgrows their bed quickly. A full size loft bed with desk underneath is not only a fun option but one which will take a long time for them to outgrow. It is a very practical choice especially if your kid's room is on the small side. This is because they provide a place to sleep, play, do homework, and keep clothes and toys in much less of an area than conventional options.

When it comes to choosing a design and color that will suit their personality a kids loft bed with desk underneath can offer a lot of variety. There are princess, car, and cartoon themed sets that they will go crazy for. And of course many also come in natural wood colors as well. Loft beds are fun because they look like bunk beds and have ladders where kids can climb up and down to their heart's content. Many feel as if they are sleeping in their very own tree house.

Not Just A Temporary Solution

Solid colored beds, particularly white, often portray a classic look that is perfect for any age and gender. Natural wood colors are great and will still look fantastic as kids get older. Best of all a change of bed sheets and accent pieces is all that is needed to transition one from a kid's to a teenager's bed. Getting a full size loft bed with desk is a great idea since your son or daughter can use it even when they are full grown. They can even accommodate adults.

Materials

These beds normally either have a metal or wooden frame. Metal is popular choice because they are generally very economical and both easy to assemble and disassemble if the need be. They are a very sturdy choice but obviously kids should never roughhouse on beds that are raised off the ground.

Perfect For Those Who Share

A loft bed with desk underneath is also a great idea for when there is more than once child sleeping in a room. Siblings can have their own beds and separate areas to play and study in a fraction of the space. They are also just a really easy way to keep a room organized and uncluttered since they usually offer storage as well.

For a fun and functional way to sleep you can't beat a loft bed with desk. Parents will love their space saving and smart design while kids go crazy for their own private play area and high up bed. Best of all they are one option your child be excited to grow into , not out of!

The Red Brick Blueprint of Bedford Park

by Beryl Robinson

St Michael and All Angels Church

Bedford Park is described as the world's first garden suburb, and was the model of how much of England's housing would be built, although perhaps with less attention to detail, and in most cases working with a smaller budget. Unlike Hampstead Garden Suburb it was not a cooperative, but became a model copied by the Garden City movement and suburban developments around the world. Bedford Park's church of St Michael and All Angels is the centerpiece of the community, with its medieval references and human scale much loved by arts and crafts practitioners William Morris and the Pre Raphaelite painters.

Jonathan Carr was the son-in-law of Hamilton Fulton of Bedford House. He saw the potential of the area around Turnham Green Station and embarked on speculative building there, buying up land from Bedford House and its neighbours. He proposed a plan which preserved the beautiful old trees already growing in the grounds and promoted the new district as a healthier place to live, within reasonable distance of the City.

Architects Godwin and Shaw set the predominant style of the development designing houses, church and public-house, followed by May and then by Adams. Queen Anne style houses were referenced by tile-hung gables, and white joinery contrasting attractively with the red brick facades. Curved gables refer to Dutch or Flemish style, and Arts and Crafts foliage and flowers make for highly individual houses. Many were built with artist's studios in the garden, and according to a survey of early residents it seems that a third of the population were artists, architects, musicians and actors. Among the architects drawn to the area was Voysey who built a modern house on South Parade with its own integrated studio.

May worked as Shaw's assistant and became part of an informal group of architects, whilst taking on the task of completing the layout and design of the buildings.

He moved into 6 Queen Anne's Grove and was also responsible for the houses in Priory Gardens, with its pretty terrace with shell-shaped porches. As well as designing houses for The Orchard, Addison Grove, and Marlborough Crescent, he adapted drawings for the Club on The Avenue, enlarging the building, and adding a theatre much needed by the high proportion of Bedford Park's artistic residents.

Hammersmith and Fulham Council orders Thames Water to fix stinking pumping station or face court Hammersmith & Fulham Council is threatening to take Thames Water to court if it does not immediately deal with the noise and smell caused by a pumping station. Neighbours say between 400 to 500 people are affected and council officers have received more than 50 complaints from people living near the Acton Pumping Station in Warple Way, East Acton. It holds storm water after heavy rain once sewers have reached maximum capacity. The smell of sewage building up at the bottom of the tanks and the noise of pumps sending water back into the sewers after heavy rain has been leaving residents unable to open their windows.

Councillor Wesley Harcourt, Cabinet Member for Environment, Transport and Residents' Services, said: "The noise and smell from Acton Pumping Station is stopping residents enjoying their homes and that is simply unacceptable.

"Thames Water has had plenty of warning about this problem and residents have had enough. The company has until September 6 to take effective action or face the consequences."

Mark Danks of Warple Way works from home and lives opposite the tanks. He estimates about 1,000 local people are affected by the tanks. He said: "Our building is very energy efficient; it feels like summer 10 months a year. It's horrible living in a place where you can't open your windows or doors, it's like being in a sweat box. If I had known I never would have moved here."

"I can't have people over, it's embarrassing. If you open your windows or doors, you feel nauseous. Many neighbours with weaker stomachs than me can't eat in their own homes."

After earlier intervention from H&F Council, which is leading the action backed by Ealing Council, Thames Water installed an automated cleaning system and a bigger, more powerful pump. But these still failed to drain the tanks properly, leaving a foul-smelling sludge at the bottom of the tanks.

H&F Council has now served the company with a legal notice giving Thames Water until 6 September to solve the problem or potentially face court action.

Anyone concerned about the smell or noise coming from Acton Pumping Station should contact the H&F Noise and Nuisance Service on 020 8753 1081 during office hours and 020 8748 8588 outside office hours.

New poll: More local support for Heathrow expansion than opposition

50% of residents in 12 local constituencies support expansion at Heathrow. 33% oppose

57% of constituents feel positive about Heathrow. 8% are negative.

This summer the Airports Commission made a unanimous and unambiguous recommendation for Heathrow expansion

Polling published today shows that over half of residents in 12 constituencies close to Heathrow support the expansion of the airport. Around a third say they oppose.

12,004 residents from Spelthorne, Richmond Park, Brentford & Isleworth, Feltham & Heston, Windsor, Ealing North, Ealing Southall, Uxbridge & South Ruislip, Slough, Hayes & Harlington, Beaconsfield and Twickenham answered questions about their feelings towards Heathrow's plans and the airport more generally. The results show that 57% of residents feel positive about the airport while 34% have a neutral feeling with only 8% saying they have a negative feeling towards it.

The research is the first since the Airports Commission made a unanimous and unambiguous recommendation to Government that Heathrow should expand. It highlights a strong level of local support in the majority of the constituencies surveyed. This further demonstrates the importance of Heathrow to local residents, those mostly affected by the airport and who have traditionally been perceived as opposing the plans. In its report this summer the Airports Commission said that expanding Heathrow is the only way to connect the UK to the growth markets of the world. Chair of the Commission Sir Howard Davies urged Government to make an early decision or risk the UK falling behind as an economy:

"The Commission urges the Government to make an early decision on its recommendations. Further delay will be increasingly costly and will be seen, nationally and internationally, as a sign that the UK is unwilling or unable to take the steps needed to maintain its position as a well-connected open trading economy in the twenty first century."

Sir Howard also confirmed that Heathrow could grow within environmental limits and operate more quietly than it does today.

"A bigger Heathrow would not inflict noise nuisance on more people than the airport does today, and the people affected would be far better compensated. Expansion and the mitigation of the airport's local impacts go hand in hand, as the former can provide the financial resources needed for the latter."

John Holland-Kaye, Chief Executive of Heathrow Airport said:

"We have a completely new plan that addresses the Prime Minister's concerns. The Airports Commission has confirmed that Heathrow expansion will keep Britain at the heart of the global economy, meets environmental targets and balances the needs of local communities. Local people support the plan along with unions, businesses and politicians across the country. Every month of delay costs Britain £1bn so let's get on with it."

Following a challenge made to Heathrow by the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) on what constitutes "local" in relation to the airport, the number of constituencies included in polling research has been increased to 12. Beaconsfield is one of the new areas polled, while Ealing North and Ealing Southall replace Ealing Central & Acton. While the ASA did not feel that Twickenham and Richmond Park are as "local" to Heathrow as other constituencies, both were kept in as residents are engaged in the issue of expansion and they were the only constituencies previously polled where opposition outweighs support. Heathrow believes that this is the fairest way to represent the combined view of local people.

Chiswick smokers urged to be quitters

Smokers in Chiswick are being urged to sign up to Stoptober, the country's 28-day mass quit attempt.

The official start date is Wednesday 1 October, the same day that new legislation comes into force making it illegal to smoke in a car with someone under the age of 18 present.

The new legislation presents smokers with another reason to quit through Stoptober – because with one less place to smoke, there's one more reason to quit.

Stoptober is based on insight that suggests if you can stop smoking for 28 days you are five times more likely to be able to quit for good. For more info visit stoptober, smokefree.nhs.uk - There is also a drop in clinic at Chiswick Health Centre, Tuesday 5.30pm - 6.30pm and Thursday 4.30pm - 5.30pm

LOCAL LIFE.

The Chiswick Rev:
Wishing we were German?

by Reverend Martine Osborne

As a child born within a couple of decades of the Second World War, I never thought I would wish to be German. To be honest, I grew up feeling sorry for children in Germany who would have to learn about their country's recent past and the horrors of the Nazi death camps.

But today I find a strange feeling stirring within me, a feeling that I would now rather like to be German. I would be proud to be German.

And all this is because of the remarkable and inspiring response of Chancellor Angela Merkel and the German people to the continuing refugee crisis that we are seeing in Europe.

Far from pulling up the drawbridge and putting herself first, Germany is saying that she will welcome all Syrian asylum seekers – even if this means encouraging refugees to pour across her borders.

At a time where we in Britain are agonising about the quota we should offer to take, with David Cameron offering 20,000 over the next five years, Germany received 17,000 asylum seekers last week-end alone.

It is truly a remarkable example that Merkel is setting and one wonders how things might be, if she had taken a different stance. Even more remarkable is the fact that all political parties in Germany – except a small dissident Bavarian group – seem to support her.

And the impact on the refugees is amazing too. Instead of receiving a grudging acceptance of their presence, they are arriving at German railway stations to find a genuine welcome. In a national newspaper yesterday I read about one young man from the devastated town of Qusayr in Syria, who was reduced to tears by the warmth and support he received from German people on his arrival in Berlin. He said, "The people here treat us so well, they treat us like real human beings."

Nigel Farage, leader of UKIP, has spoken of the EU opening its doors to "an Exodus of biblical proportions." And he's referring to the Bible account of the Hebrew people when they fled from persecution in Egypt thousands of years ago and sought refuge in what they called the "Promised Land." Of course, when they arrived in the Promised Land, not everyone welcomed them. In fact the Philistines and other tribes were extremely hostile to them. But the Hebrews came because they had no other choice – other than to return to the terror and brutality of Egypt.

Of course, Farage is right in pointing out the large numbers of asylum seekers – we are experiencing a greater level of refugee movement than even after the Second World War. But this only goes to evidence the level and scale of persecution and horror that these people are fleeing from.

As for us, we have a choice – either to be a Promised Land and welcome the refugees or to be the new Philistines and to drive them away.

Either to follow Germany's example. Or to allow Germany to put us to shame.

Interestingly my eleven year old daughter – having recently studied the Second World War at school – turned to me yesterday and said that maybe the Germans want to do this to show that they are different from the Nazis.

I doubt, of course, that this is consciously the case. But, nevertheless, the outstanding compassion and generosity, that we are seeing today from Germany, will change forever our perception of what it is to be German. And will set a great standard for the rest of us.

My Allotment

by Tony Inwood

My allotment means a lot to me. I grow a lot in it you see. Carrots, parsnips and beetroot too, shallots and pots and varieties new.

I like to sit and sip my tea and chat and laugh with my family. They each have a little plot and love to tend it when it's hot.

And oh the wonder and the fun, when we go home when day is done, and put fresh veggies on the plate. Our healthy, happy appetites to sate.

LOCAL LIFE.

Congratulations Ma'am!

After 63 years on the British Throne, the Queen becomes longest-reigning monarch

Queen Elizabeth II

It seems incredible that it has been 63 years since the young Princess Elizabeth took to the throne, but many of West London's residents still remember it like it was yesterday.

The first week of June 1953 was a time for celebrations up and down the country, with many preparing for the event weeks in advance. On the evening of Monday June 1st as people lined The Mall or finished their preparations, the news filtered through that the world's highest mountain had finally been conquered by a British led expedition. John Hunt led his team of men comprising Edmund Hillary, to the top of Mount Everest in the eleventh attempt in 30 years. The news kick started partying that would continue through to the following day and night.

Tuesday June 2nd was a cold damp day and war time gloom still hung over the country but everybody gave their best to celebrate an occasion that heralded the start of a new era. There was a real sense that the young Queen would usher a change never seen before and people referred to her as 'Young Liz' or 'The Diamond Queen', hopeful for the future.

Across the land people celebrated with street parties. West London was no exception. Streets were adorned in a riot of red, white and blue. Bunting criss-crossed the roads. Union Jacks flew in the wind and big flags hung from every window. With all the colours it was as if London was finally coming out of the grey monochrome war rubble and stepping into technicolour.

Trestle tables and chairs were borrowed from church halls for the day, each decorated with layers of table cloths and crepe paper streamers and ribbons that children had been making for weeks. Adults helped make replica crowns and cardboard cut-outs of the golden coach. The excitement grew to fever pitch. There were competitions for the best decorated house and best garden display, with small prizes, such as home made toffee tied with coloured string for the winners. Children paraded in fancy dress, some dressed as flower girls and little princesses, others more randomly as products such as a tube of toothpaste or an Oxo cube box!

One Chiswick resident, Mary Anders, remembers the excitement as a child of seeing her first television set. "We had heard that a lady in the next road to us had a new TV, so we all went round to try to catch a glimpse of the Coronation on it. Everybody walked round there; Mum, Dad and old nan, as well as my brothers and sisters.

"We all waved flags on our way and shouted 'God save the Queen' to people we passed on the way. The house was packed out with people but we all crowded in and looked at the screen. It was black and white and a bit fuzzy and couldn't have been bigger than twelve inches! It didn't matter. We saw those images of the Queen in her big coach and the room filled with silence except for the oohs and aahs. I tried to get closer up to it but it was such a new invention that some old lady in the room warned me not to stand too close as it had radiation in it! I was impressed by this technical knowledge and took it as gospel and stepped away!"

Mary also remembers that when the National Anthem was played they all stood up, the men taking of their caps, and sang along. The singing and dancing continued long into the night.

Queen Elizabeth the 2nd has not disappointed. Let us raise a glass to her long reign and hope it continues. Long live the Queen!

QPR's Charlie Austin says David Sullivan remarks felt like personal attack

Charlie Austin thinks David Sullivan's comments saying he was a risk as a signing because of knee problems was a personal attack on him. QPR striker Charlie Austin admits he was "hurt" by comments from West Ham co-owner David Sullivan questioning his fitness. Sullivan ruled out a move for the 26-year-old during the transfer window as he said it was too much of a risk for the Hammers. The businessman questioned Austin's long-term fitness after he failed a medical at Hull in 2013 and also his goalscoring ability. "I was disappointed, I felt hurt because I felt like it was an attack on myself," Austin told Soccer AM. "But these things happen and I'll put it to the back of my mind." Asked whether he thought Sullivan should have apologised, Austin said: "When do you ever hear of a football club chairman apologising directly to a player? I wasn't expecting an apology." Following a summer of speculation around his future, Austin opted to remain with QPR as they bid to make an immediate return to the Premier League. The striker, who has netted four goals in the Championship this season, said: "I've trained hard with all this going on, I have got my head down and worked hard for QPR and luckily enough we have got 10 points from 15 so far. "Chris (Ramsey, QPR manager) has pulled me in and we have had conversations throughout the window; he can't really say a lot because I've been top scorer in the Championship so far!"

Coach Andy Farrell happy with 'fortress' Twickenham results

A confident England camp are happy to have strengthened 'fortress' Twickenham while escaping without injuries to key players, according to backs coach Andy Farrell. Unlike Wales, who are reeling from the loss through injury of play-makers Leigh Halfpenny and Rhys Webb, England are largely unscathed as they look now to their opening World Cup fixture against Fiji on Friday, September 18. Their convincing 21-13 win over RBS 6 Nations champions Ireland at Twickenham on Saturday came from a much-improved performance than that seen in Paris a fortnight earlier, where head coach Stuart Lancaster's side lost 25-20 to France. "Any game, to win at home, at Twickenham, is always special for us," said Farrell. "It's our home and it's a fortress that we want to make sure is a very hard place for teams to come and play at. It was most pleasing at the weekend because of the pressure that we put on ourselves. "We had a few things to sort out from the previous game and I think we dealt with that pressure very well." He said there had been no point protecting key players by not sending them out onto the field in warm-up matches because the England management wanted them fully prepared for the tough World Cup battles ahead. "There's no substitute for actually putting yourself in those situations," he said, "and you have to have these warm-up games, otherwise you can be completely undone. "Injuries are always going to be a part of the game and we feel very fortunate that we've come through unscathed." Farrell defended Wales coach Warren Gatland's decision to play full-back Halfpenny and scrum-half Webb in their final warm-up game - despite both suffering injuries in Saturday's 23-19 victory over Italy in Cardiff that have ruled them out of the World Cup. Farrell said: "There are combinations, not just for the team but for the individual to get used to. Leigh himself would have wanted to play, I've no doubt about that. "He would have had a great 10/11 weeks of preparation. Knowing him as I do, his attention to detail would have been absolutely spot on and he would have wanted to put that out there on the field so he would have wanted to get out there and play. "It's just unfortunate what's happened - I feel really sorry for both of them."

Larnell Cole joins Shrewsbury Town on loan from Fulham

Fulham's Larnell Cole has joined Sky Bet League 1 side Shrewsbury on loan until January 3, the clubs have announced. The midfielder originally moved to London, alongside Ryan Tunnicliffe, from Manchester United when Fulham were still a Barclays Premier League team in January 2014, but has so far been unable to secure a regular first-team position at Craven Cottage.

Former England fly-half Andy Goode forced into retirement

Andy Goode is hanging up his boots after a 17-year career. Former England international Andy Goode has decided to retire from professional rugby after failing to recover from surgery on injuries. Goode, who made 199 appearances for Leicester Tigers over two spells at Welford Road, joined London Irish from Wasps earlier this summer. However, following consultations with medical staff, Goode has decided to call time on his 17-year playing career which also encompassed periods with Saracens, Brive and Worcester. Goode, 35, is one of the all-time leading goal kickers in the Premiership, with 2,147 points to his name, making him the second highest points scorer in the history of the competition behind Charlie Hodgson.

In a statement, Goode said: "Today is the day that every professional rugby player dreads. It's with a heavy heart that I have to announce my retirement from rugby. "After 17 years of playing the game I love, my mind is willing, my body, after two operations in the summer unfortunately isn't. Rugby has been unbelievable to me over my career and I've enjoyed some incredible highs and always tried to play, train, talk and live it with a smile on my face. "I've been fortunate to play in some brilliant teams for some amazing clubs. To represent England 17 times is such an honour and something I'll look back on with pride. My 10 years at Leicester - winning the Premiership five times, the Heineken Cup twice and the Anglo Welsh Cup - were more than I could ever have wished for. "My spell at Saracens was enjoyable and the experiences of playing abroad, in France for Brive and in South Africa for the Sharks, were opportunities I feel privileged to have had. "My time at Worcester and the support from the fans was great and to finish off with two memorable seasons with Wasps, helping the club return to the Champions Cup, being part of the move to my hometown of Coventry, playing at the Ricoh Arena, breaking the individual points record on my home debut and finishing with the Golden Boot, are memories that will stay with me forever. "I'm really disappointed I can't continue my career at London Irish and I have really enjoyed my short period with them and I wish them every success in the future under their new coaches and leadership. "A massive thank you must go to my Mum, Dad, Ella-Grace and Carolin who have supported me and been on the journey with me at literally every game I've played. I couldn't have done it without you. "I can honestly say I've loved playing for every team and feel immensely proud to have achieved what I have at each club. It's been an honour to pull on my jersey week in week out with some characters that will be mates for life. We've had wins and losses, laughter, stories and beers along the way and these are the things I'll remember with a smile! "Now it's time to thank the players, coaches, my agent Duncan Sandlant at Esportif International, the staff and supporters who have played a part in my career, big or small, at Leicester, Saracens, Brive, the Sharks, Worcester, Wasps, London Irish and England. "I can look back at it all with great pride, a smile and maybe a Corona!"

Sergi Canos leaves Liverpool for a loan move to Brentford

Bees sign Shrewsbury Town midfielder Ryan Woods

Brentford have signed midfielder Ryan Woods from Shrewsbury for an undisclosed fee.

The 21-year-old has signed a three-year contract until June 2018 at Griffin Park.

Brentford head coach Marinus Dijkhuizen told his club's official website: "Ryan Woods is dynamic holding midfielder player."

"He is a talented young English player and we can help him develop and move on to the next level at Brentford."

"Ryan plays with his head up and looks to attack. He tries to pass the ball forward and that fits in well with the way we want to play football."

Championship transfer window spending eclipses European leagues

Championship teams spent £100m in the summer transfer window – far more than second-tier teams in Germany, Italy, Spain and France. Big-money purchases, such as Andre Gray's move to Burnley and Moses Odubajo's switch to Hull City, propelled Championship transfer spending to its enormous total, which was four times as much as second-best Bundesliga B (£25.5m) Serie B (£14.6m), Liga Adelante (£3.65m) and Ligue 2 (£730,000) clubs were extremely modest spenders in comparison, according to the Soccerex Transfer Review 2016. The spending by Championship clubs reflects the trend seen in the top flight, where Premier League sides splashed a record-breaking £885.85m on new players this summer – a 14 per cent rise on last year.

Scott Hogan signs new Brentford contract

Scott Hogan: Joined Brentford from Rochdale

Striker Scott Hogan has signed a new contract with Brentford, extending his stay at Griffin Park for a further year.

Hogan, currently recovering from a serious knee injury, has signed a deal to stay with the Bees until the end of the 2017-18 season.

Brentford co-director of football Phil Giles said: "Scott has been tremendously unlucky with injuries since he moved here."

"We were keen to give Scott as much support as possible as he gets back to playing, so it made sense to extend his contract.

"We can now make sure that Scott is 100 per cent fit before returning to playing in the knowledge that he is with Brentford for the long term."

Hogan signed from Rochdale in August 2014, but injured his knee after two appearances and, after surgery and extensive rehabilitation, he suffered a further serious knee injury, which required a further operation.
